Battling the recession

A matter of attitude

by Susan Wilson

Last week, the Conference Board of Canada came out with yet another one of its gloomy predictions about the progress of the Canadian economy through this recession. Yet only ten days earlier, a writer in the Globe and Mail claimed that "the very forces that have driven the economy into recession are about to shape a powerful recovery." It's hard to know what to think.

It's equally hard to get a handle on how the economy is doing in Haliburton County these days. Although people in a wide variety of sectors — investment, real estate, retail, construction, and tourism — are cautiously optimistic that things are getting better, they can't really say why.

And while some of the numbers support that feeling, other statistics argue otherwise. Unemployment figures are still high, the welfare rolls are at record levels, and the food bank is busier than ever. (See box on page 31).

Generally, the consensus seems to be that people have gotten used to the recession. A year ago they were saying, let's not spend any money, we don't know what's going to happen. Now they're saying, we know what's going to happen — the same thing that's been happening for nearly two years — so let's stop hunkering down and get on with our lives.

Certainly the energy and initiative to create businesses is out there. Andy Campbell of the Haliburton County Development Corporation (HCDC) reports that they are loaning money at the same pace as last year, when the HCDC hit a record $960,000. "Our portfolio is good," he reports. "Most of our clients are able to handle their repayments and those who are in arrears are starting to make payments again."

Campbell doesn't see too many of their clients (most of whom are in the service sector) in danger of having to let go of their businesses, in spite of having their revenues cut in half by the recession. "We had some losses last fall," he continues, "but everyone who made it to Christmas is still with us. This is going to be a 'make or break' year, though, for a number of people. They're going to have to decide whether to put more equity or debt into a business that may have been losing money for three years."

When it comes to new loans, Campbell says that the HCDC's board is being "conservative" and that the banks are being "tough" about extending commercial lines of credit and first mortgages. Real estate agents are finding the same thing: that people are having trouble getting financing when they want to buy a commercial property and, as a result, the commercial realty market is very difficult. (That raises questions about the role big banks play in a small town: they take our deposits every payday, but what do they give in support to local enterprises? But maybe that's another story.)

Nonetheless, figures from the Haliburton Real Estate Board show that the total dollar-volume of sales in 1991 in the county was up 56 per cent from the year before. Much of that was undoubtedly in the cottage sector of the market. It's far too soon, of course, to say what will happen this year, but realtors like Jessie Pflug of the Re/max office in Minden are expecting a solid, if unspectacular, year.

She bases that assessment on a change in attitude from a year ago among cottage hunters. "Last year, a lot of people were looking," she says, "but they were concluding that both asking prices and interest rates would come down further. And they were right. Now they're deciding that the time is right to buy."

In the retail sector, it seems to depend on whom you talk to whether things are getting better. Mary Raby at Moyne's Furniture, for instance, has had a good year. "But I've no idea why!" she says. "We've found that people are being very careful, doing a lot of shopping around and going out of town to compare prices. Because we're very competitive, we find they often come back here to make their purchases.

"I also think people want to get back to the basics, in the sense that they want personal service. I'm the owner and I'm out on the floor selling, not out of sight in an office. People like that."

Raby feels that independent furniture and appliance businesses in larger centres south of here are having a much worse time of it. She puts it down to a conscious decision a lot of people are making to spend money in their own community. "We can't thank the local people enough for supporting us."

Stuart Brandon of Northland Sales says that his sales are down from two and three years ago, "and that's not acceptable." Nonetheless, he too is optimistic. "People's attitude seems to have changed in the past month or two," he says. "There was a time during this recession that even the people who had money weren't spending it."

But Brandon's optimism is guarded. On the one hand, he sees minor signs that the economy is improving at certain levels. "The contractors I talk to tell me they're getting more calls and doing more pricing. That means they're likely to be getting work and that means their crews will be coming in here to buy their gear."

On the other hand, Brandon has concerns about spending patterns in the coming summer. "Fears about job security are reaching up from the guys on the line and into middle management. Even some CEOs are getting worried. All those kinds of people own cottages. We'll have to see what that means for our business this year."

John Pentney, owner of Home Hardware, also sees two sides to the question. Two years ago, he noticed that both the trade side of his business (the construction companies) and the

Everyone wins with retraining opportunity

by Susan Wilson

The changes in the economy, whether you look at it globally or locally, are probably structural and probably permanent. As Bob Rae said in his television address to the province last January, "It's never going to be business as usual again." Sooner or later, that's going to mean changes in our lives and our expectations.

Some people are addressing those changes already by taking retraining. One such program is a partnership of opportunity and enterprise by both private and public agencies. When The Boathouse Restaurant in Carnarvon went bankrupt last summer, the Haliburton County Development Corporation (HCDC) found itself owning the building. It was obvious to them that the building was unsellable in its then current state and that they were going to have to put some money into it. But it's also likely that they wouldn't have done so if they had had to pay for the labour. So HCDC went into partnership, so to speak, with two other organizations.

HCDC is providing the site and the materials, Sir Sandford Fleming College is providing the training program, and the Bancroft/Haliburton Industrial Training Committee is providing funding for the instructors. Ten men interested in learning new skills are providing the labour.

Like all such training programs, those who qualify must be receiving unemployment insurance or social assistance benefits. The crew at The Boathouse consists of handymen, mechanics, construction workers who want to add to their repertoire of trades, and one man who worked in middle management in a large business.

Steve Longworth and Stefan Bjelis are the instructors in the program. "When you get guys together with such a wide range of backgrounds," Longworth points out, "it's no longer the normal teaching situation. Everybody shares what they know."

The 320-hour course spread over eight weeks (four weeks at The Boathouse and four weeks coming up at Sir Sandford Fleming College and Camp Wanakita) includes on-site classroom instruction as well as on-the-job training. The topics cover the complete range of trades involved in refitting a building, as well as safety and job-hunting.

When the program is over, the Haliburton County Development Corporation will have a better building and the "students" will have a certificate attesting to their new skills.

Everybody wins.

Safe biking this summer starts in the store

Spring has sprung, and summer holidays are just around the corner. Youngsters have already taken to the streets with their bicycles or have been asking their parents for a new two wheeler. Shopping experts at the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations have put together some tips to help out the many parents who'll be under pressure to buy bikes for their kids this summer.

Most parents want their children to have bicycles that are solidly built for safety's sake. Unfortunately, a lot of people think the best bike has to be the most expensive model with the most gadgets.

It shouldn't be—especially for your child's first bicycle. "A first bicycle should be simple, with footbrakes rather than gears and hand-brakes," advises Marilyn Gurevsky, a manager with the ministry's Consumer Services Bureau.

Footbrakes are better because young children don't have the reflexes or finger strength to operate handbrakes. At the age of six, the leg muscles are the best developed part of the anatomy, so a child finds it easier to stop a bike using footbrakes.

Also, fingers can be pinched when handbrakes are not used properly, resulting in a loss of concentration. This problem has resulted in traffic accidents involving biking.

The relatively low cost of basic bicycles these days reduces at least one problem for the parent. Some years ago it was common to see small children riding bicycles too big for them. The parents didn't want to have to buy more than one, so a larger size was bought for a child to "grow into".

"This isn't a good idea," says Gurevsky. "Riding a bike that is too big is dangerous because the child can't control it properly."

The only way to make sure the bike is the right size is to take your child for a fitting. Whether you intend to buy and open (girl's) or closed frame bicycle, the over-all size should be determined on a closed frame model. Have the child straddle the crossbar with both feet flat on the floor. For protection during falls, there should be a two inch gap between the crossbar and the child's crotch.

Generally, a child between the ages of six and 11 needs a bicycle with 20-inch or smaller rims.

You'll also need to know the saddle and handlebars are comfortably situated. Saddle and handlebar heights are adjustable on most bikes. But if full extension is needed to fit, choose another model. On many models, the posts are marked to indicate the maximum safe extensions. If the seat and bar posts aren't marked, assume you need two inches of post inside the frame to assure stability.

To measure for saddle height, have the child press one pedal all the way down with the ball of the foot, while seated. The seat height is right if the leg is slightly bent. Once the saddle is adjusted, check the handlebar reach and height. The upper body should be fairly upright when the hands are placed comfortably on the grips with the elbows bent a bit.

Once your child has a bike, everyone is set for a summer of fun, right? Wrong. The next step is to buy a good safety helmet and make sure the bike has the right equipment. Necessary items include:

- *a mirror
- *reflectors, front and back
- *a night light
- *a bell, or horn
- *a basic repair kit

Mirrors and bells need not be expensive, but a good bike helmet should be a basic part of the equipment. Studies show that, wearing a high-quality protective bicycle helmet can reduce the risk of head injuries by up to 85%. Of the 60 children who died in bicycle accidents last year, 45 lost their lives as a result of head injuries.

Businesses watch for the elusive upturn

do-it-yourself consumer side were falling off. "I haven't noticed the construction trades coming back yet," he reports, "but the do-it-yourselfers were starting to spend money again last year and they're spending even more this year."

Pentney keeps track of the average sale per person. This past Victoria Day weekend, that average was up 15 per cent over both 1990 and 1991.

So what about new construction? Is it going up as Stuart Brandon's sources suggest? Or is it staying flat as John Pentney's cash register suggests?

Gary Burtch is vice president of the Haliburton County Homebuilders Association. He sees a change coming for the better, but it will be slow. "As recently as two or three weeks ago, there was a lot of concern," he reports. "But in the last two weeks everybody's been doing a lot of pricing and actually getting some contracts. The people coming up are starting to spend money again."

Burtch also sees a shift in the kind of work being taken on. "Since the building boom we had at the end of the 1980s fell apart, most of the work has been renovations," he says. "Now new homes and cottages are coming back. It's as though people who were thinking about it a year ago decided not to at that time, but now they've decided to go ahead. And the people who were thinking about it for this year are going ahead too."

Burtch admits to being a chronic optimist. "I think we're on a roll again, but then I said that last year. But I do feel this is the year things will get going again. Not a big change, but a beginning. Next winter will tell the tale, of course — how many people have to be laid off again."

So there's cause for hope in all these sectors. But what about tourism? Look at all the places that have closed in the past year: Pine Ridge, Wagon Wheel, Schnitzel House, Hart Lodge, NJ's,

The Boathouse, Hollow Valley. And that's only along Highway 35, which is supposed to be the high-traffic corridor. Sounds pretty bad. After all, we're a tourist area, right? (Well, no, we're actually not a tourist area, we're a cottage area; but that is another story.)

According to people who work for the tourist industry across central Ontario, Haliburton is in the same position as everybody else. Jim Wayne is a consultant in the tourism sector of the Ontario Development Corporation. His office in Bracebridge lends money to businesses in Haliburton, Muskoka, Parry Sound, and northern Huronia.

"It's not pretty anywhere," he says. "It's a tough market and everybody is competing for fewer dollars. Anybody who is in trouble is trying to put together new strategies to attract more business."

Grace Cerniuk is managing director of Resorts Ontario, an Orillia-based marketing collective to which a number of Haliburton resort operators belong. "There's no doubt we're coming out of this recession very slowly," she says, "so there's a lot of uncertainty. Over the past 18 months, we've found that customers are waiting until the last minute to book their vacations and that makes planning very difficult for owners and managers. But 90 per cent of the population are working and need a break."

Cerniuk says a study of the Golden Horseshoe and northern states indicates that people are very happy with the product that Ontario resorts are providing. Responses to co-operative ads placed on television and in major newspapers have been very good. "But customers are looking for all-inclusive packages and no surprises," she says.

When it comes to Haliburton, Cerniuk feels it's "an awareness issue." "Haliburton has much to offer," she explains, "but it's not really discovered. We had a conference at the Pinestone last fall and a number of people who attended has never been to Haliburton before. They couldn't get over how beautiful it is and were surprised they hadn't known about it before."

Getting the word out is part of the mandate of Mark Stagg, who has taken over at the Chamber of Commerce. Now that the county's official plan is on hold for a year, Stagg can turn his attention to the economic development plan and tourism marketing strategy he put together a year or so ago. "We have to look at the plan to see if the assumptions are still valid and revise the timelines for implementation," he explains. "Then the changes have to be approved by County Council."

Council has already weighed in with the $52,000 requested in the Chamber's budget to carry out tourism promotion and marketing. Under a recently signed agreement, they are also paying the salaries of Stagg and two assistants, who will be under the direction of the Chamber.

Stagg is enthusiastic about the challenges ahead because he feels that everyone recognizes the need to pull together for the prosperity of the county. "All the business people are eager to get on with it and we have all the resources of the county level of government to draw on."

So the sum total seems to be that we're digging our way out of this recession one inch at a time. And maybe it sometimes seems that, for every inch out, it's three-quarters of an inch back. But everybody also seems to be saying that the changes that have happened so far are a result of changes in our attitudes. So hold onto those good thoughts and, as the sign in Stuart Brandon's store window says, "Buy something, somewhere, soon!"

Life is still a struggle for many in the Highlands

by Susan Wilson

The numbers aren't encouraging. According to a report prepared by economic development officer Mark Stagg, unemployment in Haliburton County is still over 30 per cent. That percentage translates into 1,600 people looking for work out of a work force of 4,900, over half of them between the ages of 25 and 44.

Stagg's numbers generally tally with the figures at the Haliburton County Employment Services Centre, where 1,468 people were registered for work in April. While Jane Selbie, Senior Project Officer at the Employment Services Centre, points out that the numbers are a bit skewed by inclusion of students and people who are keeping their claims open while they take on short-term work, she feels they are generally on target.

For comparison, Selbie offers the same statistic for April over the past four years: April 1991, 1,323; April 1990, 1,060; April 1989, 576; April 1988, 783. "1989 was unprecedented for being a good year," she notes.

When you ask Maurice Honeyman, Director of Social Services for the county, how the welfare rolls are, he answers with just one word: "Up." In April 1991, his office had 286 general welfare cases on the books; this April, this number was 469, an increase of 64 per cent. Honeyman notes that some portion of this increase is the result of a change in legislation at Queen's Park that came into effect last October. People who are working but earning below a certain level are now eligible to top up their earnings through welfare. The difference may be a few dollars or a few hundred, but each person still shows up as one case, regardless of the amount.

The numbers are also increased because people worked fewer weeks last summer; so they went on UIC earlier and were eligible for fewer weeks of benefits. That meant they came off UIC earlier and, with no work in sight because it was still winter, had to go on welfare.

Honeyman points out that, for all these reasons, month-to-month changes in the welfare rolls mean nothing. He points instead to year-over-year figures. "The number have been going up steadily since 1989," he says. "In 1990, we had 1,910 cases. In 1991, we had 3,418. That's an increase of 79 per cent this year."

Because of the seasonal nature of employment in Haliburton, Honeyman's office is closing out a number of cases at the moment. "But our costs still went up $11,000 in April because most of the people closing their files are singles and the people coming onto welfare are families. A family costs on average nearly three times a single."

Another change coming in welfare legislation is the requirement that people receiving it be willing to take training. Honeyman is quick to point out that the funds to pay for training will not be taken out of welfare allocations, but are additional to them.

"The hope is to get people off the treadmill of seasonal jobs," he says, "and a recession is a great time to do it. First of all, in better times, people would start training and then, when a job came along, they'd leave the training and take the job because they needed the money. So they just kept lurching along from one short-term goal to the next. Now those jobs aren't coming along. Or, if they do, there are lots of highly skilled people to take them. So more people are sticking with the training and finishing it."

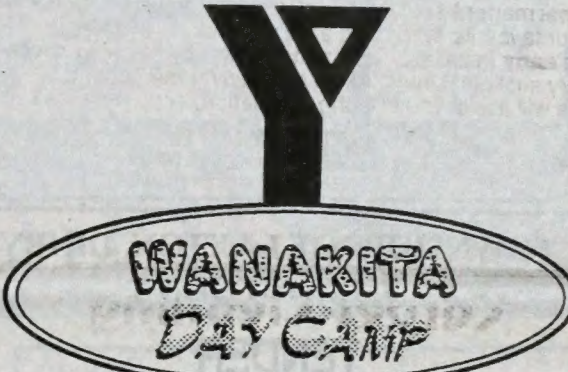

"Second, the recession has hit a lot of middle-income people who are finding themselves on welfare for the first time. They have the background in education and experience to profit enormously from retraining."

But welfare dollars often don't stretch to the end of the month. When that happens, people turn to the food banks. In Haliburton, the food bank is run by the Four Cs, a co-operative alliance of all the churches in the county.

Bob Thompson keeps the books for the organization. "Since last October, the value of the food boxes and vouchers we give out has doubled," he says. "At that time, we were giving out 15 or 16 a month. Now we're over 30. On top of that, things usually slack off in February, but we haven't seen any decrease so far this year."

Thompson notes that the ability of the Four Cs to provide this service is a direct result of the generosity of the community. "Last December, we gave out food and vouchers and presents for families in need that amounted to $14,000. And I want you to know that donations that came in after that amounted to almost exactly $14,000!"

For a community that all the numbers say should be in dire straits, Haliburton County continues to find the resources to take care of its own.

Huge balloon helps mark store opening

A huge hot air balloon helped mark the grand opening of the new Trucks Plus/Goodyear Service Centre in Haliburton May 22 and 23. Provided by Bell Cellular, the sixty foot high dark blue envelope towered over the building and spectators on Highway 121 just west of Haliburton. Unfortunately weather condition on Saturday did not allow for the 11 passenger balloon to be inflated again, so only those who happened to be passing the location Friday night had an opportunity to see it.

The balloon was part of the festivities at the opening of the new business location.

Proprietors John and Joan Stethem provide vehicle accessories, Goodyear service and tires and are local agents for Bell Cellular.

Trucks Plus owners, John Stethem, left and Joan Stethem, are joined by Bell Cellular regional representative during the store's grand opening May 22 and 23. Above, the huge Bell Cellular hot air balloon towers over the building Friday evening, the only time when the weather permitted the crew to inflate it.

Dorset acid rain report

The following report on precipitation events was recorded at the Ministry of Environment acid rain testing station in Dorset and compiled by Environment Canada.

This report covers the period of May 17 to 23, 1992.

May 17, 4 mm of rain fell with a pH level of 4.3. The airpath was Lake Huron/ Michigan/Wisconsin.

May 23, 2 mm of rain fell with a pH level of 4.4. The airpath was from Michigan.

Environmental damage to lakes and streams is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with pH less than 4.7. pH readings less than 4.0 are serious.

TSW report

Warm weather in recent days (prior to May 22) has begun to cause some slippage of water levels, but a small surplus is holding on the Kawartha lakes. Flows along the Otonabee have been held at about 55 cubic metres per second this week. Summer flow typically runs at about 17 cubic metres per second while a high spring peak flow approaches 450 cubic metres per second.

The Haliburton area reservoirs got a little boost from the rain of last Sunday (May 17) which resulted in levels averaging 98.1 per cent full on May 19. No reservoir water is being deliberately drawn at this time.

Colder weather is forecast with some rain for May 23, so early losses of level are very unlikely.

Not just objective observers

We must reconnect with the natural world

As the planetary ecocrisis worsens, we must reconnect with the natural world from which we have become so estranged. In re-establishing those old links, we will discover a very different relationship with nature that is desperately needed to change the destructive path of our species

I graduated from college in 1958, a year after the Soviet Union had electrified the world by announcing the successful launch of Sputnik. In the agonizing months that followed, Americans repeatedly failed to send up their own satellite. In order to catch up to the Soviet Union, the American government poured money into science education.

As one of the beneficiaries of the vigorous support of science, I was indoctrinated in the faith that by pushing back the curtains of ignorance and superstition, we could expose the secrets of the universe.

With enough grant money, we believed, nothing lay beyond the gaze of scientists and through your experiments and discoveries, the lot of humankind would steadily improve.

As a believer I passed that faith on to my students, watched the scientific community explode in number and vigor and saw the promise of science coming true as breakthroughs — oral contraception, space, travel, genetic engineering, computers, telecommunication satellites.

Yet in spite of the impressive progress that enabled us in the industrialized countries to enjoy the fruits of innovation, life for most human beings was still a struggle and becoming steadily worse. Even in Canada there were signs of planetary distress — decreasing ancient forests, acid rain, disappearing northern cod and degradation of agricultural lands.

Reflections

by David Suzuki

As a scientist I've had to question whether my assumption of limitless benefits from science is wrong and upon reflection, it seems the scientist's unique way of knowing is also a fatal weakness.

Scientists focus on a part of nature, bring it into the lab, control everything impinging on it and coming from it and thereby gain powerful insights into that fragment. But in isolating a piece of nature, we lose sight of the context that made it interesting and significant in the first place.

When Albert Einstein was asked by a friend whether absolutely everything could be expressed scientifically, the great physicist replied "yes, it would be possible, but it would make no sense. It would be description without meaning, as if you described a Beethoven symphony as a variation of wave pressure." Einstein's insight also applies to projects to decipher all of the DNA in a human cell or to map the complete neuro-circuitry of a brain.

It is one of the great contradictions that enthusiastic scientists are passionate and emotional about their work. Yet the publications that report their work are drained of that passion.

In the name of objectivity, scientists distance themselves from their subjects in order to remain neutral and unemotional about their studies. But in regarding parts of the animate and inanimate surroundings merely as ciphers, commodities, resources or opportunities, the bottom line of our priorities becomes control, consumption, material wealth, growth and profit, and then the application of scientific insights is invaluable destructive.

Stanford ecologist Paul Ehrlich has said "I am convinced that a quasi-religious movement, one concerned with the need to change the values that now govern much of human activity, is essential to the persistence of our civilization." He is echoed by another ecologist, Howard Odum: "The key program of a surviving pattern of nature and man is a subsystem of religious teaching which follows the laws of the energy ethic... We can teach the energy truths through general science in the schools and teach the love of system and its requirements of us in the changing churches.

As the planetary ecocrisis worsens, we must reconnect with the natural world from which we have become so estranged. In re-establishing those old links, we will discover a very different relationship with nature that is desperately needed to change the destructive path of our species. The great successes of scientific discovery must not blind us to the limitations of its application.

A few weeks ago, I wrote about research showing that babies fed exclusively on breast milk for the first six months of their lives have a much lower risk of developing juvenile diabetes. Even with cow milk, the risk is quite low and I am informed that for most women it is not physically possible to express enough milk to feed a baby for six months. About 25 per cent of women cannot produce enough milk beyond the first month while up to 80 per cent cannot express enough for the full six months.

Tax credit program announced by NDP

In the Ontario budget presented April 30th, Treasurer Floyd Laughren announced that the current Ontario Sales Tax Grants for Seniors program will be replaced by a tax credit program.

Until now, seniors received property tax and sales tax support through the Ontario Tax Grants for Seniors program. This allows for annual Property Tax Grants of up to $600 per eligible household and a Sales Tax Grant of $50 per senior, regardless of income.

As a result of the budget, the maximum Property Tax

Grant for 1992 will be reduced to $450. The Sales Tax Grant will remain at the present $50.

In 1993 when seniors file their 1992 personal income tax returns, they will apply for property tax and sales tax credits through their annual income tax return. These credits, like existing Ontario Tax Credits, will be administered on behalf of the Province by the Federal Government (Revenue Canada, Taxation).

For further information contact your nearest Haliburton County Information Centre in Haliburton or Minden.

Day burn permits cancelled by MNR

The Ministry of Natural Resources has terminated all Day Burning Permits in the Bancroft District for seasonal and permanent residents.

Special consideration may be given to contractors and municipalities. In these cases, all Day Burning sites will be inspected by ministry staff.

This policy change will reduce the chance of wildfires starting during the most hazardous part of the day. Volunteer Township Firefighters are often called away from their regular jobs to respond to fires during this mid-day period.

Fire permits are required from April 1 to Oct. 31 inclusive and are available from your local permit issuers. The allowable times for burning are before 10 a.m. and after 6 p.m. Fires for cooking or warmth are not included in this policy except when a Restricted Fire Zone has been implemented.

For further information please contact the Ministry of Natural Resources office (fire services).

Committee in place to plan health, social service directions

The Long Term Care Division, a joint division of the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Community and Social Services, in conjunction with the Haliburton, Kawartha and Pine Ridge District Health Council is pleased to announce the formation of the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee.

Members of the committee, drawn from a cross section of individuals in the county, include:

- Ruby Way, Red Cross Homemakers Service;
- Robert Beeney, Minden/Lutterworth area;
- Michael Collins, retired, Glamorgan area;
- Douglas Campbell, retired, Minden;
- Jack Brezina, publisher, Minden (chair)
- Don Shortreed, businessman, Sherborne, Livingstone and McClintock;
- Bern Berry, Reeve, Minden;
- Fred Gardiner, Reeve, Stanhope;
- Chris Hodgson, Reeve, Dysart;
- Barbara Fraser, Haliburton Social Action Committee;

- Anne Wood, Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge Home Care.

Using the Haliburton County Community Directional Plan as a major resource, the committee will advise the Long Term Care Division, Peterborough area office, and the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Council on the development of the health, housing and social services system to serve Haliburton County, with particular reference to long-term care and related services. The committee is currently involved in an intensive education process, examining the report of the steering committee in detail, studying the relevant provincial policy papers and laying the groundwork for public consultation and the planning process.

Dennis Ferenc, area manager of the Long Term Care Division and Marshall Elliott, executive director of the Haliburton, Kawartha and Pine Ridge District Health Council, expressed their appreciation that so many qualified and dedicated residents of the county volunteered to serve on the committee.

"I expect this will be a hard-working and productive committee," commented Dr. Dave Swales, Chair of the District Health Council.

One of the main recommendations of the original report was that a co-ordinator be hired to assist in the research and deliberations. In that regard, Kate Reed has been employed in this position since March of this year. The committee, with the assistance of Reed, professionals from the county and related ministries, and consumers drawn from the community, will be shaping and co-ordinating the development of a comprehensive range of long-term care and related services in Haliburton County.

Reed is a Registered Nurse with a diverse background in social services. In addition to being a Life Skills Facilitator, she has experience working with individuals with physical disabilities as well as developmentally challenged individuals. Reed has worked in several rural communities and presently resides in Dorset. Her office is located in the Hillside House, behind the Dysart Arena in Haliburton Village. She can be contacted at 457-9188.

The Haliburton County Information Service has a new updated Information Directory. The weighty tome details just about everything there is to know about social services, service clubs, information sources and more in Haliburton County. The new directory was unveiled at a special meeting at the information centre in Minden last week. Members of the board on hand for the occasion were Nancy Moore, Ed Pettinger, Joan Fisher, Billy Shuyler, Ken McLeod, Maurice Winterflood, Bill Riddell, Peg Podmore and Aileen Robertson. Board members not in attendance at the time of the photograph are Leo Dobrzensky and Walter Thomas.

Sunday, May 17 Mary Guillemain came for reading, which we appreciate greatly. Sunday evening Chapel Service was taken by Reverend John Burgess, with Alice Jones playing the organ and we thank them both very much.

Around lunch time on Sunday, May and Roy Cameron and Jacqueline Yateman took me to West Guilford for the rededication of the Baptist Church. Through the efforts of a few, their trust, energy and willingness, the Church that was in need of a new basement has a whole new basement that can be utilized for many things. The whole church has been moved and raised back into the hill, the whole length of the building. The dedication service was mostly musical since the Pastor for West Guilford and Eagle Lake, Pastor Paul Benson's family are all musical and Carl Upton. It was a beautiful service. After the dedication we went downstairs for delicious refreshments, and to visit with friends we had not seen for years. Much credit should go to Richard Henderson for the restoration of this building and church.

Monday, being a holiday, we had a sing-along with Jock Mavor's singing and playing his omnichord, and we thank him greatly. In the evening Tom McAllister came to show movies. The movie was in two parts, "Tut, The Boy King".

Pastor Fast held the Tuesday morning chapel service. Thank you Pastor Fast from the residents. Greg Sawyer conducted a quiz on well known people in the Trillium Lounge. I had a pleasant surprise when Ray and Norma Sisson (Ina McGuire and May Horseley's brother and his wife) brought Therm Varty (friends since we were six years old) to see me. Thank you Ray and Norma.

Wednesday afternoon three teachers, Debbie Wales, Kathy Stackhouse and Ed Poropat, brought Archie Stouffer School's grade 6 pupils to perform for the residents. They sang and acted each song, such as "Many A Day" and "Monday Morning School Blues". The grade 6 school choir sang "Ever Green, Ever Blue". The children did well and are well behaved. Their teachers must be very competent and we thank them immensely.

Wednesday afternoon Terry Barnum came to Hyland Crest to take a bus load of residents for a drive for ice cream. We returned via Highway 35 to Scotch Line Road to Bobcaygeon Road and back to the Home. Terry was driver, Linda Fry - Manager, and Gregg Sawyer. Volunteers were Janke Thomas and Dorothy Milne.

Pastor Murray came in the evening for a service in the Trillium Lounge. The residents sincerely thank him.

Thursday was tea party again. This one was rather special since it was Bea Brittain's 90th birthday. The table was decorated with a Happy 90th Birthday streamer and flowers, and

A celebration of active living

Celebrating its tenth anniversary, Canada's Fitweek is an annual celebration of active living — the largest such event in the world. More than 16,000 community, school and workplace events are sure to occur during Fitweek 1992. Events are designed to provide opportunities for all Canadians to be physically active during the campaign and beyond.

Although the majority of Canadians take part in Fitweek on an individual or informal basis, many will take part in an organized event. The 11 national projects for Fitweek 1992 are: Sneaker Day, Canadian Tire

Report from Ottawa

from the office of Bill Scott, MP

Get Cycling Challenge, Do It Daily... For Life, Guiding is Active, MOGA Madness, U2 Can Canoe, Shift Shuffle, Spacetrekk 2000 and Walk On. In addition, many groups will use their imagination to create their own events.

Fitweek was inaugurated in 1983 as a means of initiating new or infrequent participants to enjoyable physical activities. In view of the fact that only one third of the population is active enough to benefit their health (Campbell's Survey on Well-Being in Canada, 1988), an added challenge for Fitweek is to introduce participants to regular physical activity and to encourage them to adopt an active living lifestyle on a year-round basis. It is an opportunity to launch new programs, associations, and leaders to link together, and communities to cooperatively promote active living.

The benefits of active living are many — enhanced physical, mental and social well-being and improved quality of life for individual Canadians and, for Canadian society, enriched cultural and national identity and improved economic vitality. Everybody wins when everybody's active.

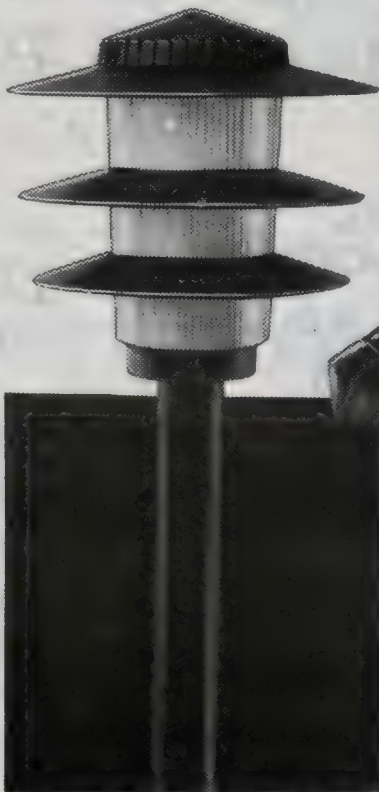

All Canadians are encouraged to participate any way they see fit. Whether it's making a personal commitment to walk with a friend, or participating in one of the 16,000 organized Fitweek events. But don't stop there. Fitweek is just the start for all Canadians to become regularly active, everyday throughout the rest of the year. During Fitweek 1992, join millions of Canadians and make physical activity a part of your everyday life. Now is the time to "celebrate active living."

When you buy Canadian, there's a payback. In jobs and a stronger economy.

EVERY TIME YOU GO SHOPPING, YOU'VE GOT CHOICES TO MAKE AND DECISIONS TO REACH. CERTAINLY, YOU SHOULD COMPARE PRICE AND QUALITY. THEN, TAKE A MINUTE TO THINK ABOUT CANADA. BECAUSE WHEN YOU BUY A CANADIAN-MADE PRODUCT OR SERVICE, OR SHOP IN A CANADIAN STORE... THERE'S A PAYBACK. IN CANADIAN JOBS AND A STRONGER ECONOMY. CANADA. BUY INTO IT.

Should you decide to brighten up your life with some Canadian lighting products, you'll brighten up a lot of other lives too. Canada's lighting industry accounts for more than 1,300 jobs and in excess of $80 million in annual sales.

When you participate in almost any sporting activity, you're also participating in the growth of a major Canadian industry. Canada's sporting goods industry employs more than 9,000 people and ships some $750 million worth of products annually.

Most experts will tell you that the greatest future growth in the computer industry lies in the software and service sectors. If so, Canada is well-positioned, with more than 50,000 people generating $4.6 billion in software and service revenues.

Genealogy study uncovers two new family members

Genealogy is not just looking for those ancestors who have passed on...it's finding those "lost" relatives too.

That was what Carol (Lichty) Miles' family recently found out. They are one relative richer as a result of Carol's "Addiction".

Carol has been heavily involved (her family calls it obsessed) in researching her family's roots for the past five years.

Thanks to the genealogical research of Carol Miles, two cousins from her family, who have been unaware of each other's existence, have been introduced. Iona Unger, left and Inez Miller recently spent two weeks getting know each other.

Iona Unger and Inez Miller, first cousins, had never met before; neither knew the other existed until Carol brought them together through letters. She recently helped her mother Pat (Miller) Lichty arrange to have Iona visit. Iona resides in Rainy River - a village on the Ontario/Manitoba border. The family has spent two lovely weeks getting acquainted.

Carol has also recently finished a Lichty history book (for her father Leroy's side of the family). The book covers from 1756 to 1990 and Carol is offering the book for sale to family members.

Genealogy group welcomes all interested residents. The next meeting is June 24 at 7 p.m. in Minden Council Chambers or call Carol at 286-1752.

Mr. & Mrs. Fred Gardner of Hall's Lake are happy to announce the marriage of their daughter Karen Maureen to Gregory Scott Stoneman, son of Mr. & Mrs. William Stoneman of Burlington and Hall's Lake. Wedding to take place, Saturday, June 13, 1992, at The Old Mill Chapel, Etobicoke.

Residents enjoy chuckwagon lunch

In the evening Nancy Briggs came from West Guilford to call bingo for us. She is a very good caller. When she came in she had a bundle of jonquils which she divided among those who attended bingo. They were lovely and we thank her so much for them and for calling for us.

Friday we held a Pioneer Fun Day. Instead of the usual fun and fitness we played games made by Doris and Gregg, such as "Rabbit Shoot", "Roping The Cow", and "Cowpatch".

Lillian Harrison won Rabbit Shot, I won Cowpatch. For lunch we had a chuck wagon buffet that was very good, thanks to the kitchen staff. The Grandfathers Four Plus One entertained us for Happy Hour with singing and music. Bill Payne, Don Burch, Charlie Hadley and George Smith, we thank you for a happy hour of music.

The afternoon was ably taken care of by volunteers Ellen Holden, Bonnie Fullan, Mary Guillemin, Janke Thomas, Dorothy Milne and of course, Linda Fry, Gregg Sawyer and barman Don Holden. Thanks to everyone.

There were six birthdays in May: Myrtle O'Halloran, Alice Rivers, Beatrice Brittain, Jean Taylor, Lorne Fry and Marshall Harrison.

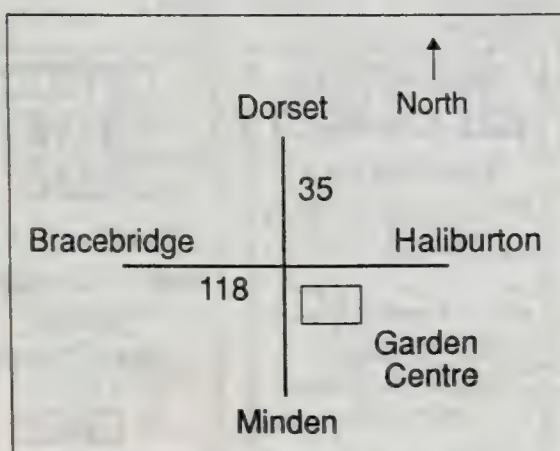

Lillian James has been in the hospital but is home again. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Dianna Morris came Friday night for reading, which we enjoyed very much.

IN MEMORIAM

YEARWOOD: In loving memory of a dear wife Luella who passed away May 25, 1991.

God Saw you getting tired,
When a cure was not to be.
So He closed his arms around you,
and whispered "Come to Me."

You didn't deserve what you went through,
So He gave you rest.
God's garden must be beautiful,
He only takes the best.

And when we saw you sleeping,
So peaceful and free from pain,
We could not wish you back, to suffer that again.

Dearly missed by husband Cecil and family.

LINDSAY, EVA: In loving memory of a dear sister who passed away May 30, 1967. We often think of bygone days, When we were all together, The family chain is broken now, But memories will last forever. To us, she has not gone away, Nor has she travelled far, Just entered God's eternal home, And left the gate ajar. Lovingly remembered by Mother and sister Nell.
